The hut is the work of Mrs. Harry Hark-ess Flagier and Mr. and Mrs. Albert ness Flagier and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Herter, who have spent many days seeing that the finishing touches were applied properly to the building, which has been attracting far more attention than any of the big skywcrapers in the neighborhood of which it nestles.

Mrs. Flagier gave the furniture, pictures, curtains, and so on, and Mrs. Herter superintended the interior decoration of the components of the com ion of the comfortable, 40x80 building at the northwest corner of the park, where hereafter Uncle Sam's boys are welcome to drop in and write letters, play the plane, eat, smoke, read and reer. Tea was meant to be served only to the special guests who attended the preliminary or press view of the place, but boys in blue and boys in olive gray, reading or writing at the tables, saw the good things going round and sidled up, so Miss Marion Hollins, the girl athlete who has been doing such good work in the thrift stamp campaign, stepped in and helped Mrs. Duryes, and every boy was served.

Next to the canteen is the information booth, where time tables, "seeing New York," leaflets, &c., are to be had for the taking, and theatre tickets may be had at cut rates. Gum, candy, smokes, money orders and so on will be for sale there, and a young man is always in attendance to tell the boys what they want to know. Here also the man in uniform can buy a room for the night, no matter how late it is—the rooms aren't there, but the Y. M. C. A. will tell him where they are to be found.

MASS MEET CALLED TO ENLIST NURSES

Meet Emergency.

The demand for nurses for army service is so imperative that the American Red Cross has arranged for a mass meeting to be held in Carnegie Hall next Friday night, June 14, as a means of emphasizing the need. The Red Cross has found that 25,000 nurses must be enrolled by June 1, 1919, which means that at least one in three of all the graduate nurses in the United States must answer their country's call. It means also that the number of young women entering nurses' training schools must be increased substantially. The Carnegie Hall meeting, at which, the subject will be thoroughly discussed by speakers of national reputation, is expected to launch a successful campaign for enrollment and training.
